PREFACE

My sole aim of presenting this book to the reader is to create his interest in Tantrism, by initiating him in the cult of occult science what in the tantric treatises is known as ṣaṭkarman (sixfold activity). As all these activities are performed by the urge of desire or out of motivation, to promote human good, a right direction based on some reliable tradition and followed by a clear exposition made by a competent preceptor becomes, as a matter of course, quite indispensable. According to Haṭha-yoga pradipikā[1] all supreme attainments, spiritual or material are hard to reach without the grace of a guru. But the reader need not despair if he finds no guru at hand. The treatise itself serves the purpose of a guru. It expounds the material so explicitly, in unambiguous terms, that one ne o go in search of a teacher.

Practice is better than precept. The aspirant should not doubt the validity of statements made in the treatise. It is an āgama śāstra that has come down to us from hoary antiquity. So far as practice is concerned, I take the reader into confidence that in certain cases as those of pacification (śāntikarman) I myself have made experiments and discovered the truth.

I started my studies on this manuscript just after I had finished my work on the Āśvalāyana Gṛhyasūtra, though as I planned I intended to introduce the work much earlier. During the time I was engaged in editing and translating the Āśvalāyana Gṛhyasūtra, a number of valuable books on tantrism had appeared both in the East and the West. A wide reading in this subject during the intervening period when the Āśvalāyana Gṛhyasūtra was in press, undoubtedly turned the delay to the better, for now I can present the work in mature and appropriate form. Moreover, fortunately, at present, there is a greater receptivity and evaluating standard for such a work than when I first interprized it.

The trend of the tantra śāstra is materialistic throughout, but the results are immediate. As Kulārṇava[1] has pointed out, whatever yields an immediate result is the best of all activities.

The text of the manuscript was obtained for me from Pandit B.P. Shastri's Collection at Balaghat, Madhya Pradesh. The present edition is prepared on the basis of that manuscript, which is still in my possession, though it is reduced to decrepit condition by the constant use. The text and the yantras are quite intact though marginal notes have become indistinct. The text is often corrupt and at places beyond recovery. Though I have made certain emendations here and there they are all tentative. Until another manuscript is discovered, the corrupt portions of the text cannot be restored to their original form with such precision and certainty as is required for the tantric text.

Despite the great care taken in reading the proofs, there are a few misprints left in the text, in addition to the usual casualities due to the breaking of types in printing. The keeneyed reader can detect them at a glance. They are too obvious to need a formal corrigenda.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT OF OBLIGATIONS

I express my sincere gratitude to my venerable teacher Professor S N. Pant, M.P. Education Service, Reewa, for his kind encouragement that inspired me with confidence in making this task as much complete and contributive as it became possible for me to accomplish.

I am also grateful to my niece Madhu Bala Sharma for her valuable help in the preparation of manuscript copy for press, for reading final proofs and checking Index. But for her cooperation, the book would still have been limping through.

I cherish sincere feeling of affection and love for my printers, Sham Printing Agency, Delhi, and my publishers, the Eastern Book Linkers, the reputed enterprizers in the field of Indology, both for the expeditious publication of this work and all other assistance rendered to me in this matter.

INTRODUCTION

The manuscript

The manuscript of the present treatise measures 7 inches in length and $3\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, consists of 39 leaves (78 pages), 9 lines on each page and 30 letters of alphabet in each line. It is written on country-made paper, in Nāgarī script, in versified simple Sanskrit. As usual with the tantrāgamas it employs verse in the anuṣṭubh metre, though at places it is interspersed with Mandākrāntā, Upajāti and Śārdūlavikrīḍita. It is dated Vikrama saṁvat 1944, Śaka saṁvat 1809. The figures refer to the date when the manuscript was copied by the scribe and not to the date of its composition.

Source

The colophons of the manuscript reveal the existence of a larger work, now lost to us, bearing the same title and dealing with the same subject. The present treatise seems to be a compilation from that larger work which was divided into four Pīṭhikas. The colophons refer to the second[1] and fourth[2] Pīṭhikā. The introductory text is taken from the second Pīṭhikā while the chapters on the sixfold activity are taken from the fourth. As it includes all the topics of ṣaṭkarman in their various aspects, it is a complete book in itself.

The Author

As stated above, the present treatise is an abridged version of a bigger work—Mahākalpacintāmaṇi which remains so far untraced and is not catalogued either. As a part of āgama literature it comprises the material that has descended to us from time immemorial. Hence its authorship, as of any other āgama, cannot be ascribed to any particular person.

The entire tantric literature runs in the form of a dialogue between God Śiva and his consort Umā (Umā-Maheśvara-saṁvādaḥ). The versified presentation of the dialogue that comprises the āgama-śāstra is traditional and cannot be authored so far as the matter is concerned.

But the problem remains unsolved. Who was the original versifier of the proto-kalpa ? When did he versify the extant oral tradition, and at what place ? How did he collect the material and from what source ? In the absence of an authoritative evidence, it is not possible to solve the e baffling puzzles. The compiler of the present treatise is as ignorant of the solution as any historian of tantric literature. While he admits that his Kalpa is a compilation from a bigger work,[1] he is silent over the authorship of the proto-kalpa, perhaps in recognition of the fact that tantrāgama literature, as any other āgama literature, is the outcome of ancient tradition, descended from generation to generation by way of oral transmission.

The compiler of Kalpacintāmaṇi is Dāmodara, the son of Gaṅgādhara.[2] He calls himself 'the best of brahmins'.[3] He was born in a Vaiṣṇava family, as his very name indicates. But he was Śaivite himself. He compiled this Kalpa out of devotion for Lord Śiva[4] and in obedience to his instructions. No further information is available about Dāmodara.

Arrangement of the Subject matter

The book deals with seven topics arranged in the following way :

1. Subjugation (Vaśīkaraṇa).
2. Attraction ākarṣaṇa).
3. Immobilization (stambhana).
4. Dissention (vidveṣaṇa).
5. Liquidation (māraṇa).
6. Eradica ion (uccāṭana).
7. Pacification (śānti).

Each of the seven sections (adhikāras) enumerated above, deals, in its own way, with a particular topic such as Subjugation (vaśya), Attraction (ākarṣaṇa), etc. Each section consists of a set of alternatives, which vary from 25 to 4. For instance, section I that deals with the topic of Subjugation offers 25 alternatives on the same subject. The aspirant may select any out of them for operation and observation, according to his means and convenience. Alternatives are most necessary, for it may not be possible for an aspirant to procure some articles of worship, say a red lotus, a black berry or the seeds of dark dhattūra plant, for an activity such as subjugating or liquidating a person. Or he may find that a particular yantra which otherwise is efficacious for his purpose is not in concord with him, is either indifferent or inimical[1] to him. Options are given so that in such situations the aspirant may take up an alternative, that is to say, another yantra, equally potent for the accomplishment of his object. The seeker should know that in potency and effect the yantras are invariably infallible. Invested with the energy of the lord, they can be employed with confidence for achieving a purpose.

TANTRA, YANTRA AND MANTRA

Significance and Scope

The word tantra is derivable from $\sqrt{}$tan to extend or spread (Cf. Pāṇini's Dhātupāṭha : tanu vistāre) and is usually applied to a system which pertains to the development of Man's power both material and spiritual. A class of literature pertaining to this system teaches magical and mystical formularies for the worship of deities in order to gain superhuman power.

A set of literature on the system contains four sections which are named (1) jñāna : esoteric knowledge of a mystic syllable such as aiṁ krīṁ hriṁ or a sentence such as Kāmākṣi prīyatām mama, (2) Yoga : particularly the attainment of power (siddhi or māyā in tāntric parlance), (3) Kriyā : construction of icons, establishment of piṭhas and building of temples for conducting esoteric practice and (4) Caryā : adjusting the tāntric ritual to social needs.

1. For detail, see Akaḍama cakra, Intro. pp. xxi-xxii

Tāntric literature is in the form of a dialogue between Śiva and Pārvatī. On the basis of this dialogue this literature is divided into two main classes—Āgama and Nigama, When in the dialogue Śiva is the speaker Pārvatī the listener, the class of literature is called āgama. Conversely, when Pārvatī is the speaker Śiva the listener, the class of literature is called Nigama. But, in fact, all such divisions are artificial, for Śiva and his Śakti are basically inseparable. Moreover, it is the exposition of the secret doctrine that is important. It matters little to the reader whether Śiva or Pārvatī is the main speaker in the dialogue. But a sādhaka attaches great importance to his deity.

The Objective

The system serves a twofold purpose. On one hand it meets the earthly aspirations of the seeker through esoteric formulas (mantras) and mechanical devices (yantras). On the other, it accomplishes his spiritual needs by imparting instructions in yaugic ways and accomplishments. In the religious Sanskrit literature the system has acquired a wide significance. It applies to esoteric doctrines, mantras (sacred formulas) and yantras (appliances).[1] The esoteric doctrines furnish the philosophical background of the tāntric cult ; the mantras and yantras meet his practical needs. The tantras widen his mental horizon, the mantras and yantras invest him with the threefold[2] energy of the lord which he can acquire by practice and which he can use at his will.

Tantrism through the ages

Tāntric beliefs and practices have existed in different cultures and countries from time immemorial. They are universal and can still be recognized within the framework of Indian religion.

In ancient India Tāntric rites had existed much before the rise of the Vedic cult. Archeological excavations at Harappa and Mohenjodaro reveal that even prior to the spread of the Vedic cult a form of yaugic practice was in vogue. The sculpture of Śiva in yaugic posture at Mohenjodaro proves that Tāntric cult existed even in the pre-Vedic age. Such a cult might have been the practice of Indian aborigines or of earlier immigrants who were driven southward by the Aryan invaders from the West.

Tāntric practices were in vogue in the Vedic period. The Vedie sages possessed esoteric powers which they could exercise at will. The Ṛgvidhāna expounds, at length, the efficacy of the mantras of the Ṛgveda, especially their power of healing. The Bṛhaddevatā refers to the practice of liquidation[1], immobilization[2] and pacification[3] prevailing in the Ṛgvedic period.

The Atharvaveda contains a number of mantras on magic and witchcraft. The study reveals that there existed the Atharva sorcery which had four kinds of the Homa cult in exact coincidence with those of the Buddhist ritual.

Tāntric influence is found also in the Upaniṣads in the theory of Māyā propounded by statements : Indro māyābhiḥ puru-rūpa iyate (Indra becomes multiformed by taking recourse to Māyā). The concept of Māyā which became subsequently an integral portion of Indian philosophical thought in the writings of Śaṅkara and others is now associated in the popular mind with the energy of lord Śiva. The concept has gained popularity since it is sufficient to explain away all that is beyond the reach of human experience.

Tāntric influence is found in the developed form in the later Vedic Age. The Śrauta Sūtras prescribe sacrifices such as Śyena-yāga for liquidating the enemy. The Gṛhya-sūtras contain rites which can be equated with their counterparts in the Tāntric texts. Tāntric influence is traceable in the offering of animal flesh and Soma drink to the gods and manes in order to gain some particular ends.

Jain and Buddhist ritual, though of very late origin is marked by Tāntric influence. I-tsing (700 A.D.) mentions the existence of a bulk of mantra literature at Nālandā and he himself is said to have been trained in the esoteric doctrine though he could not master it satisfactorily. Tāntric cult seems to have existed at Nālandā and other Buddhist centres in 720 A.D.

The epics and the Purāṇas abound in episodes relating to occult practices. Their study reveals that this vidyā was popular among the asuras and later on entered the Brahmanic fold. Scores of Asuras Śambara, Namuci, Vṛtra and the rest practised Māyā. Asura experts could assume any form, enter into the body of another, revive the dead to life and were capable of performing thousands of such miracles.

The present treatise, edited from a single available manuscript and published for the first time is a valuable contribution to Tantrāgama literature.

AKAḌAMA CAKRA

At present Tantra Vidyā is known to a few select experts. An aspirant who relies on printed tāntric texts is disillusioned at the failure of his achievement although he has acted rightly in the prescribed way. For, the existing tāntric texts are incomplete. They are not accompanied by the necessary prescriptions which are not found at one place but are scattered over many texts. To illustrate our statement : a mantra is efficacious to a person only when it accords with his name. To know of the accord, there are cakras that tell us if a mantra with a potency of achieving our purpose is friendly, inimical, tardy or indifferent to us.

Draw twelve Koṣṭhas (apartments or sections) in the manner shown in the Cakra. Put Nāgarī vowels a ā i ī u ū e ai o au aṁ aḥ in their serial order, one in each of the twelve Koṣṭhas beginning with the topmost central koṣṭha. Then put consonants in the same serial order, repeating the process till they are exhausted. The result is the akaḍama cakra, a name formed on the basis of letters abiding in the topmost central house.

Now if a person desires to take up the mantra potent for the achievement of his purpose, let him apply the akaḍama cakra and see if the first letter of his name is in accord with the first letter of the mantra.[1] The Rudrayāmala[2] records the method how the accord between the mantra and person can be ascertained by the medium of the akaḍama cakra. If the first letter of the mantra (excluding oṁ) is stationed in the first, fifth or the ninth house from the house in which the first letter of the person occurs, the mantra is named siddha and it takes time to succeed; if it occurs in the second, sixth or tenth, the mantra is called sādhya and it is indifferent, that is to say, it may or may not achieve the intended purpese ; if it is in the third, seventh or the eleventh house it is called susiddha or friendly and the result is immediate. If it occurs in the fourth, eighth or twelfth house it is named ari or enemy and destroys the sādhaka root and branch.

Thus, according to the Rudra-yāmala, the mantras are fourfold : Siddha, sādhya, susiddha, ari.[1] A reference to this kind of division is found in the Kalpa but it differs in interpretation. A three-day ritual is enjoined to ascertain if the performance would come out successful. The deity of the mantra would tell the aspirant in dream if the mantra would succeed shortly or after some time, or if it would be harmful to the practiser, or if it would fail in attaining to his purpose. And if there is no indication in dream, the sādhaka is advised to give up the project.

But the akaḍama method is more convenient and less hazardous.

UMĀMAHEŚVARASAṀVĀDAḤ

1. ekānte deva-deveśaṁ dṛṣṭvā devaṁ śucismitā |
upagamya śanair vākyaṁ provāca jagadambikā ||

A Dialogue between Umā and Maheśvara

1. (Once upon a time) the Mother-goddess of the universe approached Śiva, the supreme lord of all the gods, when he was all alone. She spoke to him gently, with a playful smile on her lips.

ŚrīDevy uvāca

2. deva-deva jagannātha karuṇākara śaṁkara |
varṇāśramāś ca dharmāś ca sandehāś ca mama prabho ||
3. yāni kāni ca kalpāni purāṇādīni vai prabho |
śrutaṁ sarvaṁ mayā tvaṁ tu sarvajñosi yataḥ svayam ||
4. mantrāṇāṁ viniyogas tu yantrāṇāṁ nirṇayas tathā |
ācaranti ca ye lokā yogābhyāsaḥ sudurlabhaḥ ||
5. sudurlabhataraṁ jñānaṁ śikṣākāṇḍaṁ sudurlabham |
anekadhā mantrayogo vedoktopi ne dṛśyate ||
6. vaśyādyāgamabhedeṣu udito hi na saṁśayaḥ |
evaṁ dvijāś ca mantrajñā dṛśyante kleśabhājinaḥ ||
7. pāṣaṇḍibhiḥ parābhūtā nāstikair vedanindakaiḥ |
vinā mantrair vinā japyair vinā homair mahāprabho ||
8. tatkṣaṇāj jāyate siddhiḥ susiddhā sarva-kāryavat |
māraṇoccāṭanākarṣā vidveṣastambhane tathā ||
9. etat sarvaṁ yathā deva siddhyati sādhakasya vai |
vicārya deva-deveśa rahasyaṁ paramaṁ vada ||

The Mother-goddess said

2. O lord of lords, O lord of the universe, full of compassion, bestower of welfare and auspiciousness, you have already told me all about the castes and stages of life with their respective characteristics and cleared my doubts thereto,

Nepal Sanskrit University, Balmeeki Campus, Kathmandu

CC-0. In Public Domain. Digitization by eGangotri

3. You have related to me all about the kalpas and the purāṇas. I have known full particulars of the same from you as you are well-versed in the subject and omniscient too.

4-6. I have also heard from you the application of the mantras, the efficacy of the yantras and whatever else is practised by the people in this direction.

7-9. I know that the knowledge of Yoga is out of reach for the common man; the realization of Self is equally hard to attain; the paraphernalia of art and science is also difficult to grasp. The efficacy of the Vedic lore is proving ineffectual though it is often cited in the āgama texts which deal with the (sixfold) knowledge of subjugation (vaśikaraṇa) etc. Thus the expert practitioners of the Vedic lore who are expected to alleviate suffering by their knowledge are laughed at, ridiculed, and superseded by the lay magicians who revile the Vedas. Tell me, O Lord, how is it that an aspirant can secure an immediate success in the execution of liquidation, eradication, attraction, dissension, immobilization and such-like undertakings, without resorting to a mantra, japa and homa. O lord, tell me the secret of this, after a careful thinking.

ŚrīŚiva uvāca

10. vedācāro mayā prokta ṛṣīṇām tu mahātmanām |
vedāntaṁ bahudhā proktaṁ bhairavaṁ vahudhā priye ||

11. dharmārthakāmamokṣāṇāṁ jñānaṁ caiva prakāśitam |
rahasyaṁ gopitam bhadre sarvatrāpi na saṁśayaḥ ||

12. rahasya-hīna-mantreṣu budhānāṁ vā viśeṣataḥ |
na sidhyanti varārohe kalpakoṭiśatair api ||

Lord Śiva said (in reply)

10. Dear lady, for the use of noble sages, I have expounded the Vedic way of life. I have interpreted the ethico-philosophical aspects of the Vedas and explained the lore of the Supreme Self too.

11. I have opened the door of knowledge of the four vargas, viz., dharma (righteousness), artha (economy), kāma (desire) and mokṣa (liberation). But, O good lady, I have not disclosed to any the secret of these lores.

12. O sweet, unless their secrets are grasped, the mantras cannot prove effectual even to the experts, though they may put up mighty exertion.

ŚrīDevy uvāca

13. prasādaṁ kuru deveśa mukhyopāyaṁ vada prabho |
rahasyaṁ ca subodhaṁ ca sadyaḥ pratyaya-kārakam ||
14. vinā homena jāpyena puraścaraṇasevayā |
kalau tu sidhyati deva tathopāyaṁ vadasva me ||

13-14. The Mother-goddess said

O Lord of lords, do a favour to me. O Lord, tell me the most effective means, the easily intelligible secret of success which may carry immediate conviction to the people. Tell me the means which may lead to success in the Kali age, without home, japa, and puraścaraṇa.

ŚrīŚiva uvāca

Lord Śiva said :

15. You have well spoken, O most intelligent lady, you have well spoken. O lotus-eyed one, this sort of knowledge has not been unfolded to any so far.

16. Listen, attentively to this secret knowledge propounded in the Kalpacitāmaṇi, the secret of the secrets which gives immediate success.

17. O goddess, in this auspicious Kalpacintāmaṇi there are several yantras which if employed bring about the fulfilment of desire.

18. One should keep this Kalpacintāmaṇi at home and worship it every day. It has a strong potency which I narrate to you.

19. The abode which possesses this text has no fear of thieves or untimely death. Bhūtas, pretas and piśācas cannot exercise their evil influence on that house.

20. A deception practised by the enemy cannot achieve the desired effect on that house. O fair-eyed one, the aspirant should entertain no distrust in this.

Nepal Sanskrit University, Balmeeki Campus, Kathmandu

21. The Kalpa-Cintāmaṇi is Lord Viṣṇu incarnate. Any doubt entertained by the aspirant will be injurious to him. If a yantra is drawn with a doubt in the mind, it will turn hostile to him.

22. The aspirant should take bath, purify himself and repeat the mantras in propitiation of the family deity. He should then carefully draw and fill up the yantra in a quiet place.

23. The ritual of each yantra, for whatever purpose it is enjoined in the Kalpa should be undertaken consecutively for three days. Worship should be offered accordingly.

24. He should sleep on the ground for three nights. He should observe celibacy for the same period. He achieves success within three days.

25. The deity of the mantra would tell the aspirant in dream if the mantra would succeed shortly or after some time, or if it would be harmful to the practiser or would fail in attaining purpose.

26-27. If there is no indication in dream, the mantra would not achieve his purpose. Whatever indication the practiser receives in dream he should inform his client. The success of performance can be ascertained by indications received from the deity in dream.

28. In submission to Lord Śiva, Dāmodara, a noble Brahmin, completed this sacred treatise—the Kalpa-cintāmaṇi containing the most secret devices (yantras) of sure success.

Subjugation

1. Hail to the supreme Lord Śiva, the annihilator of all sufferings, whom the Brahmins worship also in the image of Viṣṇu by the lustration of lights, by thetr bowing down and offerings of lotuses, who as a lover shares half of his body with his beloved Umā and who swallowed poison for the protection of universe.
2. Dāmodara, son of Gaṅgādhara, compiled a number of fruitful yantras and expounded their application in this treatise named Kalpacintāmaṇi for the subjugation of noble as well as common men and women.

Lord Śiva said

3-5. O Goddess ! now listen about an illustrious yantra which subjugates the noble and common men alike : He should cleanse a vessel of brass with ashes and draw a yantra thereon with a pen of nutmeg wood, with an ink of sandal and yellow pigment, write the name of the person to be subdued in the centre, close in with a circle, draw eight petals and write in each the syllable ca and enclose the petals with a slender circle in the manner as described previously.

6-8. He should draw thereon a lotus with sixteen pericarps, write vowels beginning with a in the leaves serially and encircle the splendid yantra with three lines and worship the same with white lotuses, white flowers, citron, nutmeg and others of sweet fragrance and with white pieces of cloth.

9-10. He should repeat the process for seven days and then encircle the yantra with three pieces of iron and wear the same either on head or arms or neck. With a firm faith in his performance he can subjugate any man or woman to his obedience as a master his servant.

Appeasing the king's anger

Lord Śiva said

1. Now, I shall tell you about a yantra together its bīja which subjugates the noble as well as a common man.

2-4. Draw the syllable hrīṁ four times in one line. Below, in the second line, write the name of the person to be subjugated with hrīṁ on each side. Below, in the third line, write hrīṁ four times. Encircle the yantra with two lines drawn quadrangularly, and also with another set of two lines in the same prescribed manner. The yantra should be drawn with the ink prepar d from the mixture of nutmeg, suffron, sandal and the blood from the ring-finger.

5-6. When he finds the king is angry, out to destroy him or put him to captivity he should worship the splendid yantra in the prescribed manner, with flowers of various kinds, offerings of gifts of meat.

7-8. He should feed the maidens and the Brahmins according to his capacity, worship the well-adorned yoginī-s and then go to the court, wearing the yantra on his person. The king will soon be pacified and relax anger by the efficacy of this yantra.

Subjugating the master

Lord Śiva said :

1-5. Now, I shall tell you about a yantra which subjugates the master for ever. He should draw three long lines horizontally, above and below, join the lines with the pericarp on both sides, write Om Śrīm, the name of the person to be subjugated followed by Śrīṁ Om, draw three leaves above and below, write Śrīṁ four times on both sides above and below, with Om in the middle. In the two pericarps, right and left he should incribe kṣaḥ and tā.

6-7. He should prepare the yantra with nutmeg juice on the leaf of birch, place the yantra in the vessel and purify the same with fire. He should sip the yantra together with the ashes. Thus he can subjugate the master for ever..

Winning the Ordeal

Lord Śiva said

1-4. If a person desires his work to be accomplished, he should draw a six-cornered yantra on the leaf of a birch tree with nutmeg juice and suffron paste. On the inner and outer covers he should write hrīṁ, the name of the person to be conquered encircled by hrīṁ on both sides, then hrīṁ above and hrīṁ below on the opposite sides.

5-6. He should close the yantra within two sherds of a vessel, and worship it, then tie the same in the tuft of hair over the head, observe silence and meditate. Thus he comes out successful in the ordeal.

Subjugating the people

Śrī Śiva said :

1-6. If the king is angry and ready to strike, the yantra should be drawn on the birch-leaf with the mixture of juices of nutmeg and saffron. Draw two parallel lines, join them with small horizontal lines at both ends, write the name of the person to be subjugated, preceded and followed ly hrīṁ saḥ. Draw two pericarps on both sides, inscribe hrīṁ saḥ yaḥ hrīṁ in each. Draw three leaves above and three below and inscribe hrīṁ saḥ yaḥ hrīṁ in each leaf. Put the yantra in two sherds of a vessel and worship the same in the prescribed manner. By this process, one can make one's slenderer dumb and bring the king to subjugation. The yantra is known as the immobilizer of the backbiter and the subjugator of the ruler. The process is to be repeated for seven days. Success is guaranteed.

Conquering Death

Lord Śiva said :

1-8. When the master is angry and out to inflict punishment, the servant, for his safeguard, should draw a yantra named Mṛtyuñjaya together with the Bīja. The yantra should be drawn in a quadrangular shape on the leaves of the birch tree, with the name of the person to be subjugated in the middle. He should draw round seven lines quadrangularly, with an iron-pen and above the lines on all sides he should write three ls. To the East he should draw la, lā, li; to the South lī, lu, lū; to the West le, lai, lo; to the north lau, laṁ, laḥ. Thus in the twelve leaves he should inscribe one bīja in each leaf. In the corners he should draw tridents with a dot. But he should draw two yantras (of the same description), put them together on the ground, himself facing north, should pierce the yantra with a trident and throw a slab of stone on it. Then facing the master he is sure to effect conciliation. The yantra is named as 'the winner of disputes'. It is resorted to by the noble. It should not be disclosed to a common people. Otherwise the yantra will lose efficacy.

9. This yantra is the conqueror of death and the protector of life. When resorted to by the aspirant, it will not allow even the dreadful god of death to approach him. If the god approaches at all, this efficacious yantra will surely protect him against his fury.

Subjugating the creditor

Lord Śiva said

1-9. If perchance, the debtor loses the borrowed money in business and the creditor demands his money back which the borrower cannot return and the creditor refuses further loan, the debtor should draw a six-cornered yantra on the leaf of a birch tree with the juicc of nutmeg and suffron, and write the name of the creditor in the centre and hrīṁ in the outer six corners klīṁ in the inner six corners, draw a circle around, inscribe hrīṁ twenty five times, worship the ynatra for thirtyone days and the goddess mahāmāyā everyday as prescribed in the Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa, continue homa for seven days when at completion, he should make the final offering to the fire and feed the three maidens. Each mantra of the goddess should be followed by the offering of milk-rice, honey and ghee. The yantra should be closed in the three pieces of iron and worne on the wrist. Thus he can subjugate the creditor and avoid loss in business.

This yantra is very useful for trade.

Guarding against the backbiter

Lord Śiva said

1-6. When the king's court is infested with the wicked people who indulge in backbiting day in and day out, he should draw a yantra for subjugating the wicked. He should write in the centre the name of the person to be subjugated, draw a circle round it, and eight leaves round the circle, write oṁ in the leaf, followed by saḥ in the second leaf, thus serially in the rest of the leaves. In this way, the yantra drawn on the birch leaf with the blood of an ass should be encircled by two quadrangular lines, worshipped and put in the milk for twentyone days. The slanderers and back-biters disappear and the person receives honour from the king.

Winning a case

Lord Śiva said

Now, I shall tell you about a yantra which brings victory to the person concerned. The yantra removes fear of losing litigation and is therefore welcomed by all.

2. Write in the first line hrīṁ smā twice, the name of the person to be conquered in the second and hrīṁ smā twice in the third line as in the first line above.

3-9. Encircle the yantra by quadrangular lines and draw eight leaves around the circle. In the east write mo in the middle, kṣaṁ on both sides; dhaḥ in the south-western corner and jam in the north. Thus putting twelve bījas in their proper places put the yantra in between the two pot-sherds, worship the same with fragrant flowers and eight candles, worship the eight guardians of quarters in their proper order of position, feed the maidens with offerings of lights and continue the process until success is attained. Thus a person can surely win in all cases of disputes or debates and receive honour from the king.

lac, nutmeg, with the pen made of Jāti wood. O fair-faced lady ! in the first line he should write hrīm seven times, kroṁ, hrīṁ, kraṁ, klīṁ, klīṁ, gaṁ in the second line and the name of the person to be subjugated, klīṁ hrīṁ klīṁ hrīṁ klīṁ hrīṁ in the third line and hrīm four times in the fourth line, then encircle the yantra with the line drawn squarely. Write the syllable gaṁ ten times in each of the three directions—east, west and north. These thirty syllables shall have their faces turned upward.

9-11. He should make an image of Gaṇapati from the black clay and put the yantra in his belly, worship the image with fragrant flowers with the mantra : O god of gods, lord of gaṇas, devas and asuras, homage to thee. O lord put N.N. in my control. Digging the earth, he should make a pit and put the image of Gaṇapati therein. As long as he lives, the person sought to be subjugated remains in his control.

Subjugating the People

Lord Śiva said

1-4. Now I shall describe a yantra that easily subjugates the people. He should draw a yantra on the birch leaf, put the name of the person to be subjugated in the centre and ī below the name, encircle both with the three lines and then draw four pericarps round the circle on four sides. In the pericarps in the east and the west he should write Oṁ namo, Oṁ namo and in the pericarps in the north and the south Oṁ Ajite, Oṁ Ajite twice in each respectively.

5-8. This yantra is very efficacious in subjugating the king and his officials. The aspirant should worship the yantra for three days continuously, observing celibacy. On the fourth day he should feed a brahmin, put the yantra in three pla'es of iron, one above the other and wear it on the arm-pit. He should wrap the yantra in gold, or silver or copper or a piece of silk, wear it on the arm-pit or the neck. This latter prescription is common to all the yantras. It is decorative, attractive and tasteful to the people.

Subjugating the People

Lord Śiva said

1-6 O lady, now listen about another yantra, very efficacious to subjugate the people. He should draw on the birchleaf with the pen of nutmeg wood and with the ink prepared from camphor, musk, sandal and yellow orpiment. In the line to the east (i.e. in the first line) write oṁ vaṁ jeṁ hrīṁ iṁ; in the second line he should write the name of the person to be subjugated, followed by iṁ hrīṁ oṁ ḍaṁ in the same line; in the third line yaṁ oṁ and the name of the place or city he lives in, followed by ṭhi ṭhaṁ diṁ in the same line; ḍhaṁ in the fourth line. Round the mystical letters he should draw two square lines and wrap the yantra in the three plates of iron and wear the same on the arm-pit.

Subjugating the Servant

Lord Śiva said

1-6 When the servant being angry intends to disclose the secrets of his master and it has become impossible to check him by any expedient, the adept should draw the Piśācikā yantra for his subjugation and the accomplishment of his purpose. The yantra should be drawn with yellow orpiment on the birch leaf.

He should write the name of the person in the centre, put a circle around, draw four pericarps round the circle in four directions and inscribe the mystic syllable hriṁ in each pericarp. The auspicious yantra should be put in the curd. He can subjugate the servant by this process. The circulation of this yantra is restricted to very few people (or its efficacy is lost).

Subjugating the Wicked Master

Lord Śiva said·

1-8 When a master with cruel nature, surrounded by vicious circle, of wicked character, of noble or ignoble lineage, a usurper or of low class, troubles his subordinate or dependent, the latter should resort to the kālānala yantra. He should draw a yantra on the bark of a birch tree with the yellow orpiment for his subjugation. He should write hrīṁ, followed by the first letter of his name, then hrīṁ again followed by the second letter of his name, and hrīṁ again followed by the third letter of his name, hrīṁ again, followed by the fourth letter of his name (i.e. as many hrīṁ syllables as the syllables of his name) and iṁ at the end. The yantra should be drawn lengthwise, four-cornered, encircled by three lines, with dust from the ground where he places his feet. He should make his image out of that clay in line-drawing and place the yantra in the centre of the image (i.e. in the heart), dig the earth close to the hearth, therein install the image and worship it at night on the fourteenth day of the dark half of the month. An offering of incense with the goats' blood shall be made in the fire for one hundred and eight times, to propitiate the guardians of the quarters by reciting the mantra : Oṁ mahākālāya svāhā.

Subjugating the Wicked

Lord Śiva said

1-5 If a person enters into partnership and a partner proves dishonest and misappropriates the amount or if the ruler of the country or the travel-guide turns inimical, he should draw a yantra on the bark of a birch-tree with the yellow pigment mixed with the dog's blood. In the centre he should write the name of the person to be subjugated with hrīṁ on both sides of the name. Then on four sides, he should write Oṁ ākarṣaya svāhā. This four-cornered yantra should be encircled by two lines. Then in the four corners he should draw two tridents facing inside and worship the yantra. He can subjugate even the most cruel person in this way.

APPEASING THE ANGER

Lord Śiva said

1-9 If a friend or a relative or an enemy goes angry, then for the appeasement of his anger he should draw a yantra on a pair of arka leaf with the ashes from the cemetery, join the two leaves with a thorn, write ībhyaḥ on four sides facing the inner circle and draw an outer circle around. Then in the inner circle, he should write the name of the person to be subjugated with hrūṁ on both sides of the name. He should draw this yantra with a thorn or iron-pen on the leaf of a palm tree on the day of the moon, throw yantra in the clay of the potter, worship the same by reciting the mantra: "O Jamadagni, of firm vow, truthful and ireless, of pure form and father of Paraśu-rāma, homage to thee."

10-11 He should repeat this process for seven days and after the completion on the seventh day he should feed the deserving brahmins well versed in the Vedic lore or give them uncooked food to last for seven days. The angry person becomes well disposed and his anger disappears in a moment.

The aspirant should draw two quadrangular lines with four corners, write inside, in the first line, hrīṁ thrice, the name of the woman followed by uvāca in the second line, and three hrīṁ syllables in the third line. Then outside the enclosure she should draw eight pericarps and write hrīṁ thrice in each pericarp facing the inner enclosure.

6-11 The yantra should be drawn on the birch leaf with the yellow pigment, saffron, musk, sandal, on the thirteenth day of the bright half of the month. She should worship the yantra for seven days at night with various articles of food, flowers, clothes and decorative ornaments. On the seventh day she should feed seven women who have their husbands alive, recite the following laudatory : O beloved goddess Lalilā, be pleased to grant me health, victory, good fortune and longevity. Then completing the process she should wrap the yantra with a metal and wear it on the neck. She will attain good fortune, health, love of her husband and victory over the co-wife.

WINNING HUSBAND'S LOVE

Lord Śiva said

1-8 Listen, O dear lady ! about a yantra that helps to win the favour of the husband. She should write, in the centre, the name of her lover (husband) with sa on the four sides (east, west, north, south) and encircle the yantra with two quadrangular lines and around the lines outside she should draw eight pericarps and write the mystic syllable hrīṁ in each. The yantra should be drawn on the birch-bark with nutmeg and saffron fluid, worshipped for three days at nights in the bright half of the month. On the fourth day she should worship the blessed women of her family with the mantra : "O dear lady, be pleased with me by my worship. Subjugate the man of my desire." Reciting this mantra and worshipping the women (of the family) she should wrap the yantra with a metal and wear the same on the neck. This wins the husband to her side and she is blessed with enough fortune and favour of her husband, lording over the co-wives. She should feed a lady of good fortune on the fourteenth day of the bright half of the month, repeat the process in each month (for the continuity of her good fortune).

The knowledge of this yantra which brings good fortune should not be imparted to all.

Subjugating a Woman

Lord Śiva said

1-10 Listen, O lady, I shall tell you about an infallible yantra that subjugates women. Draw a yantra with the fluid of nutmeg, saffron, sandal and musk on the birch-bark with the pen of nutmeg wood. Write the name of the person to be subjugated in the centre, put aiṁ hrīṁ klīṁ on both sides of the name. Then draw a guadrangular line around, write aim hrīṁ klīṁ outside the lines in the corners north and south and aim hrīṁ klīṁ kṣīṁ aiṁ to the east as well as west, close the yantra with a circle, make an image of the person with the sandal wood and place the yantra on the navel. He should worship the image at night as well as at sunset every day, continuously, with various articles of food, fragrance, incense, lights and fruits. By this process he can capture any woman. This yantra would surely win her. The image of kāma (god of love) should also be worshipped with the mantra : May kāma (cupid) bodiless, five-arrowed, mitigator of pride, fish-bannered, son of Brahmā, favour me.

He should repeat the process till he attains her.

Generating Love in a Woman

Lord Śiva said

1-5 Listen, O lady, I shall tell you about a yantra that excites women to love. Draw a yantra on the birch-bark with the fluid of nutmeg mixed with the blood of a horse.

Write in the centre oṁ hrīṁ, the first syllable of the name, then hrīṁ, the second syllable of the name, then hrīṁ, the third syllable of the name, then hrīṁ, the fourth syllable of the name, then hrīṁ and close it with oṁ. The same should be drawn on the sides east and west. The three sets should be separated by straight lines. The yantra should be closed by two quadrangular lines, outside of which in the north and south he should draw quadrangular pericarps and write the same formula in both.

6-8 The yantra should be drawn on an auspicious day. He should raise an image of Kāma every day and throw the yantra on the head and navel of the image with a great force so that it should pierce the navel and the head. He should worship the image with the red sandal and red flowers every day for twentyone days. Success is guaranteed.

Subjugating the Women of Royal Family

Lord Śiva said

1-2 Now I shall tell you about a yantra that can subjugate even the queen. The proud ladies pierced by the arrows of the cupid, as it were, are subjugated even by a single glance of the lover.

3-9 For this purpose, the aspirant should draw a six-cornered yantra with the pen of jāti wood, and the ink prepared from the fluid of nutmeg, saffron and camphor. In the centre, he should write the name of the person to be subjugated with hrīṁ to the east. Then closing the yantra he should draw the three-cornered three petals in each side i.e. east, west, north and south with kroṁ in the middle preceded and followed by hrīṁ in each side. In this twelve-cornered yantra, hrīṁ kroṁ hrīṁ should be put serially. Dressed in white clothes he should worship the yantra with devotion with fragrant flowers and sweet offerings, and at night, he should think of the women as standing in front of the yantra. He should repeat the same for seven days and at the end shall feed three brahmins with various articles of food with the mantra, : May Kāmākṣī be pleased. He should give fee according to his capacity and feed a woman. He should wrap the yantra in a three-layered piece of iron and wear the same on the arm. Not to speak of ordinary women, even the queen will suffer from the pangs of love at his sight.

Subjugating either sex

Lord Śiva said

1-2. Now I shall tell you about a yantra whereby a man can attract a woman. If a woman wears the yantra with faith and confidence she becomes blessed with good fortune. This mystic yantra brings good luck to all, especially to the male.

3-5. This six-syllabled yantra proceeds from top to bottom, with syllables serially arranged one after the other as sīṁ, hīṁ, kīṁ, līṁ, dīṁ, īṁ.

Nepal Sanskrit University, Balmeeki Campus, Kathmandu

6-7. The yantra should be drawn on the birch bark with the fluid of nutmeg, saffron, and worshipped for three days. Embossed in a golden amulet, it should be worne on the armpit by the male, on the neck or wrist by the female. The yantra brings good luck and destroys misforune coming from any quarter.

Attaining fertility

Lord Śiva said

1-3. Now I shall tell you about a yantra, Kāmānala by name, that brings good fortune to the woman alone. By wearing the same a barren woman becomes fertile. A woman whose children die at the early age is blessed with children who attain longevity.

4-7. The yantra should be drawn with the fluid of nutmeg and saffron on the bark of the birch tree. In the centre, write the name of the person to be subjugated preceded by Oṁ hrīm and followed by hrīṁ alone. Write krauṁ above and Krauṁ below the name, close the yantra with a circle. Draw eight petals outside the circle, write hruṁ in the north-east, north-west, south-east and south-west petals, then Oṁ hrīṁ, juṁ hrīṁ in the east, west, north and south petals.

8-11. She should worship the mantra for three days, feed a brahmin and recite the mantra : "May the lord of the universe be pleased." Emboss the yantra in gold and wear it on the middle finger. Thus she gets rid of her barrenness, attains fertility and is blessed with offsprings reaching prolonged age. O fair-faced lady, this kāmānala yantra has come out from the mouth of Brahmā. Its circulation is not open to all.

II. ATTRACTION

Lord Śiva said

1. Now I shall tell you about a yantra called attraction (ākarṣaṇa). This great yantra comes from the yakṣa Maṇibhadra and is the greatest of all wonder-workers.

2. This yantra should not be disclosed to everyone but be kept closely guarded and secret. It should be written on the birch-leaf with the fluid of nutmeg, etc.

3. The aspirant should write, in the first line, the syllable saḥ four times and ī once at the end.

4. In the second line, he should write saḥ twice, followed by kroṁ hrīṁ kroṁ. In the third line he should write the name of the person to be attracted.

5. In the fourth line hrīṁ kroṁ hrīṁ kroṁ and the same in the fifth line. The yantra should be closed by three circular lines.

Nepal Sanskrit University, Balmeeki Campus, Kathmandu

6. He should worship the yantra in the prescribed manner and encircle the same with the thread, and make the image of the person out of the paste on his body and
7. place yantra on the navel, heating the same with the fire from the Khadira wood. For three days consecutively, he should repeat the following mantra :
8. Om Maṇibhadra, do thou attract Devadatta at full speed, homage to thee.
9. By this process, maṇibhadra surely brings the person even from a distance.

Befriending a person

Lord Śiva said

1. Next I shall tell you about a yantra which is not easily accessible to the aspirant. He should draw this yantra on the leaf of a birch tree with the blood of an ass mixed with the fluid of sandal paste.
2. He should write the name of the person, put a circle around, draw four pericarps round the circle.

3. Put hruṁ in each of the four pericarps. By this process he will be able to see his friend. Such is the efficacy of this yantra.

4. This yantra is very confidential and should be guarded with care. It should not be entrusted to everyone or its efficacy will be lost.

Lord Śiva said

1. I shall now tell you about a yantra called Traipura. Draw this yantra on the birch leaf with the nutmeg juice.

2. Write the name of the person in the centre, preceded and followed by hrīm. Draw six corners (four on sides, one in the east, and one in the west).

3. In each of the corners write sauṁ. Worship the yantra, then place it in ghee.

4-5. Worship the same on all days and beseech Traipura with the mantra : O speediest one, O dear one attract N. N. for my sake. Repeat the process for seven days. It will not fail to attract the person for him.

Attraction

Lord Śiva said

1. I shall now tell you about a yantra that attracts women. This is the secret of secrets which yields immediate success.
2. This great yantra, difficult of performance, should not be made accessible to all.
In the first line, write Oṁ hrīṁ klīṁ.
3. Below (in the second line) write tri svāhā. This should be repeated in the third line. In the fourth line, O wise one, he should write the name of the person to be attracted.
4. A triangle should be drawn to encirle the yantra. Worship the yantra, in the prescribed manner, with auspicious fragrant flowers, incense, etc.
5. Within the shortest possible time of a prahara, no doubt, the person thus sought is attracted. This Kāmarāja yantra is not easily accessible even to the gods.

3: IMMOBILIZATION

Lord Śiva said

1-9. I shall now tell you about a yantra which can immobilize the enemy. The aspirant should write on the birch leaf with the fluid from the nutmeg tree. Draw a six dimensional quadrangular yantra with each dimension separated from the other by two longdrawn lines. Each dimension shall have, six syllables, viz, uṁ, ma, la, ba, ra, ya in the serial order. And outside the circle, the yantra shall have three ukāras on each side (thus 12 ukāras in all), four tridents, one in each corner, and seven tridents in the east and seven in the west.

10-11. After inscribing the twelve ukāras symbolical of twelve suns and with his mind steady and firm, he should worship the yantra in the prescribed manner, muttering the mantra Oṁ, hrīṁ immobilize, immobilize, immobilize the mouth ṭha, ṭha, ṭha, svāhā. He should repeat the mantra for one hundred eight times for three days at sunset, with yellow flowers as pure as gold.

12. Thus worshipping the yantra for three days at sunset he can immobilize the move of the enemy or make the people dumb.

Immobilization

Lord Śiva said

1-2. I shall now tell you about a yantra which can immobilize a person completely. Draw a yantra on two slabs of stone with a yellow substance—a mixture of nutmeg, orpiment, turmeric, red arsenic and saffron.

3. Inscribe Kumbhe mohe in the first line, the name of the person in the second, followed by mohe in the third.

4. Encircle the same with lines drawn quadrangularly. Draw a trident, in each of the corners as well as in the centre on four sides, outside the circle.

5-8. Drawing eight tridents thus, worship the yantra with fragrant substances, earthen lamps and sweets of various kinds.

After completing the worship, put the yantra in the midst of the pit in an auspicious place, fill up the pit with clods of clay and kindle fire thereon. This will surely immobilize the person. The yantra is very effective. Even a vessel placed upon the yantra is immobilized.

Immobilization

Lord Śiva said

1-4. Now I shall tell you about another yantra, most effective in immobilization, one that can immobilize the adversary in debate, etc.

Draw this yantra with a yellow fluid on the pair of pieces of stone (to be joined together, one upon the other), write the name of the person in the centre and put a triangle around. Draw eight pericarps round the circle, outside, with laṁ in each. Worship the same with yellow flowers, earthen lights and sweet articles of food.

5-6. Then feed a brahmin with milk-rice, mixed with sugar, worship the yantra and place the same in a pit. In contests of debate, law-suits, etc. the adversary's mouth is sealed thereby.

7-8. While worshipping the yantra he should use Karṇīkāra, Ruruja Dhattūra, Ketaki, yellow Campaka and Nāgakesara. O fair-faced lady, other than these yellow flowers are strictly prohibited.

9. O Goddess Supreme, this yantra makes the adversary altogether speechless. The yantra should be given to a very few and kept very confidential.

Immobilization

Lord Śiva said

1. Now I shall tell you how to make the opponent speechless. O lady of good vows, if there be a dispute with the opponent, he should make the following yantra, for the immediate achievement of his purpose.

2-3. The person who is much perturbed in the mind (by the behaviour of his adversary) shall write the opponent's name with the chalk at night, in the prescribed manner. From that base he should draw eight lines pointing to the eight quarters serially and a trident at the end of each line.

4-6. He should worship the yantra in the prescribed manner with white flowers and auspicious fruits, with fragrant material like incense, etc, articles of food and pieces of fine white cloth. He should feed a brahmin, recite the mantra : May lord Śiva be pleased with me. In debates and slanderous allegations this yantra compels the opponent to hold back his tongue and not to harm the interests of the practitioner.

Immobilizing fire

Lord Śiva said

1-5. Now I shall tell you about a yantra that immobilizes fire. Draw this yantra on the birch-leaf. Write the name of the accuser in the centre, accompanied by kroṁ in the beginning and at the end as well as above and below the name. Enclose the same with the quadrangular lines in duplicate and draw the trident on each of the four corners outside the lines, also in the middle, outside the outer lines in the east, west, north and south.

6-7. Worship the yantra, feed the brahmin, put the yantra on the ground, float the same on the stream. As soon as the yantra is sunk in the water, the fire loses its heat (and the person wins in the ordeal).

8. This yantra is named stambhana, for it helps the person to win in the Ordeal. It should not be given to everyone or its efficacy will be lost.

Immobilizing fire

Lord Śiva said

1. I shall now tell you, O Goddess, about a yantra that immobilizes fire and wards off danger from the house where the yantra is kept.
2. The person who holds this yantra by his hand need not suffer from the fear of fire even in dream.
3. Draw this yantra with the fluid of eight fragrant substances for the immobilization of fire, etc.
4. Just as a snake if pressed by the feet cannot but sting the the person indeed, so the immobilization of fire cannot but prove most effective, as a matter of course.
5. Just as the physician's medicine wards off untimely death, similarly, this yantra too removes the danger of accidental death.
6. Draw the yantra with the fluid of sandal and nutmeg trees on the birch leaf. Write your own name in the centre, closing the same with a circular line.

7-9. Draw vaṁ outside the circle in all the four quarters, encircle the yantra with quadrangular lines. Embossing the same with three pieces of iron-sheet, wear it on the arm-pit or on the neck ; or keep the same in the midst of house or put it in the milk and worship it on all days. The yantra wards off danger from fire or any other source.

He should feed the brahmin and worship the yantra.

Immobilization of journey

Lord Śiva said

1-7 I shall now tell you about a yantra that prevents the beloved person from going abroad. O lady of charming face and bright smile, if a person bent upon going abroad turns deaf to the entreaties of his beloved, then she should draw a yantra for his immobilization and put the same into practice.

In spite of that if he moves, he will come back soon. Draw the yantra with a yellow substance on a wooden plate. In the centre, write the name of the person to be immobilized and put laṁ just before and after the name and close the yantra with square lines. Hang the yantra with its face to the earth, on the middle wall of the house. This indeed immobilizes the journey of the beloved.

Immobilizing the Back-biter

Lord Śiva said

1-2 I shall now tell you about a yantra that immobilizes the movement of the back-biter.

O Goddess of charming face, when a back-biter exercises a hold over the king, one should draw this yantra as a counter measure, to effect immobilization of his activities.

3-11 Draw a yantra on the bark of the birch tree with the fluid of sandal paste. Put krom before and after the second syllable of the name; hrīm before and after the second syllable, krom before and after the third syllable and hrīm before and after the fourth syllable. square lines. Then in long-drawn leaves in each corner of the square line write yaṁ, saṁ, raṁ, vaṁ, raṁ, yaṁ. Then facing the square line write roṁ kṣaḥ in each side (east, west, north, south) of the square. Completing the yantra thus O lady of bright teeth, he should worship it with the fluid of red sandal paste, red flower, red clothes and with his own blood and copper coins as gifts, according to his capacity. He should feed the brahmins with a liberal heart. Digging the pit he should deposit the yantra therein.

12 O lady of pretty face, thus the backbiter is immobilized in all activities.

4 DISSENTION

Creating Dissention

Lord Śiva said

1 O Goddess, I shall now tell you about a yantra that creates permanent dissention between men and women.

2 O lady of charming face, O Goddess Supreme, he should write this yantra the Destroyer of Harmony with the fluid of saffron and nutmeg on the bark on the birch tree.

3-8 Draw eight horizontal lines keeping distance from one another, from east to west. Enclose the same with double square lines on all sides. Write durbhago bhava durbhago bhava in the first line in nine-chambered yantra (The last syllable va will stand outside the outer circle). In the second line, in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth chambers write the name of the person to be estranged. The second line is repeated in the third line below. In the last line in the chamber write durbhago bhava durbhago bhava as in the first line. (Here too, the last syllable va will stand outside the outer circle). Outside the square in the east write Oṁ Ajite svāhā. Outside the square in the west, write Oṁ Aparājite svāhā. Thus the yantra being ready, he should repair to the river where out of the clay from the bank he should make an image of Gaṇapati and put the yantra in the belly of the image.

9-10 Then he should make another image of Gaṇapati with the cream of milk and worship the same with flowers of different sorts and balls of sweets in large proportion.

10-11 Wishing to please Gaṇeśa he should feed children with sumptuous food. Thus having propitiated Gaṇapati, lord of gaṇas, he should put the image and the yantra in between the two pot-sherds. This performance brings an ever-green misfortune to the couple for ever.

12 Thus exorcised, the man would not endear woman, though she be very attractive or very faithful. Likewise woman would not compromise with man though he be soft and accommodating.

13 This yantra creates a lasting dissention between man and woman, is the secret of secrets, not transferrable to a common man or it will bring the contrary result.

Creating dissention in the ranks of the enemy

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that creates bitter dissention among the ranks of the enemy.

2 With the fluid of the enemy's blood and the pen of a crow's tail, draw a yantra in the centre of a piece of cloth from the coffin of a corpse.

3 Worship the yantra with the balls of sweets glued with the blood of a goat.

4-5 In the yantra write hrīm thrice in the centre in a single line, the name of the enemy just below in the second line. Encircle the same with the three circular lines. Draw four pericarps, one in each side of the circle and write hrīm thrice in one line and the name of the enemy in the second line, in each of the pericarps. Worship the yantra, at night, with flowers and other gifts of worship.

6-7 He should feed a female ascetic and worship the teacher, put the yantra in the temple of Śiva or in the cremation ground but not at home. Thus he can create dissention in the ranks of the enemy.

8 This excellent yantra which creates dissention should be laid in the cemetery or in a solitary place but not amid the crowd.

2 With the blood of a ram mixed with the ashes from the cremation ground, write the name of the person in the centre and draw a triangular circle around.

3 Write ra above and below the circle and then draw an outer circle in quadrangular shape.

4 In each of the four corners he should draw four tridents, a set of two facing outward and another facing inward.

5-6 He should worship the yantra in the prescribed manner, then dig the earth as deep as seven fingers and bury the same under the ground, on the path traversed by the kins This creates dissention in the ranks of relatives.

2 He should draw a yantra on a piece of cloth from the coffin of a corpse at night on the fourteenth day of the dark half of the month with the blood of the enemy, with the pen of the crow's tail. He should write the name of the person in the centre and close the same with a circle.

3-4 He should write ra thrice, above and below the circle, prefix and suffix the same with yaḥ, write yaḥ raḥ on the left as well as on the right side of the name outside the circle.

5 Writing the yantra in this manner, he should bury the same under the ground on the path traversed by the master and the servant. So long as the yantra remains buried under the ground there would last an estrangement between the two.

Causing dissention

Lord Śiva said

1 O dear, I shall now tell you about a yantra that causes dissention between man and man. This yantra, bhayānaka by name, inevitably brings misfortune to the enemy.

2-4 He should draw a yantra, with the blood of a crow and an owl or with the fluid of his own blood, with the pen of a crow's tail. He should write the name of the person at night, in the centre, on the leaf of a birch tree, on the eighth day of the dark fortnight of the month or on the fourteenth day of the same fortnight.

5 He should write the name of the person in the centre and draw a circle around. Then write ḍha, outside the circle, twenty in number. Then write durbhago bhava on all the four sides and encircle the same with a round circle. The yantra should be buried in the abode of the family but not in the centre of the abode.

6 So long as the yantra remains buried in the abode, there is estrangement in the family. The method of worship in regard to the yantra is the same as prescribed before.

Liquidating the Enemy

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra which liquidates the enemy. This yantra should be written on the forehead of the image of the person.

2 This yantra should be drawn in the cemetery on the fourteenth of the dark half of the month at night with the fluid of the dhattūra plant.

3-4 The person drawing the yantra should not wear dress at the time, and should be all alone. He should write the name of the enemy on the leaf of namrātaka with the pen of the tail of the fox, prefix and suffix the name with maśli and encircle the yantra with two lines forming a triangle.

5-6 O lady of good face! the front line of the yantra should be quite straight. He should place the yantra between two sherds of a pot and throw it in the house of the enemy after rendering devotional worship with the offerings of blood and other articles.

Liquidating the Enmey

Lord Śiva said

1-2 I shall now proclaim about a yantra which can liquidate one and all.

Draw a yantra all alone by your self, at the dead of night, at the spot where the dead are cremated, on a piece of cloth from the coffin with the fluid of poison mixed with human blood. Write, in front, the name of the person to be liquidated prefixing and suffixing the same with human blood.

3 O goodfaced lady, he should repeat the same in the second as well as third line and enclose the yantra with a double circle.

4 He should make an image of the enemy with the dust from his feet, put the yantra upon the navel of the image and then place the image on the bare ground.

5 The enemy begins to suffer by and by from the scorch fever and dies on the seventh day without fail. The process of worship to be followed is the same as prescribed in the description of previous yantra.

Liquidating the Enemy

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that liquidates the enemy who cannot be liquidated otherwise.

2 Draw a yantra on the leaf of a birch tree, with the liquid of yellow orpiment in the prescribed manner. Write the name of the person to be liquidated with the pen of a crow's tail.

3-5 In drawing the yantra the process followed is the same as previously stated in the context of liquidating the enemy. The process need not be repeated here, for that would only tend to the enlargement of the book.

Put hrīṁ in the beginning of the name, encircle the same with a triangle, draw tridents in each of the three corners. Worship the yantra in the manner as prescribed previously in the context of liquidating the enemy.

Liquidating the Enemy

Lord Śiva said

1-2 I shall now tell you about a yantra that can liquidate the enemy stationed even in distant lands.

Pounding a piece of charcoal from the pyre in the cemetery he should prepare an ink with the blood of the deceased mixed with poison in the sherd of a pot.

3-7 He should write the name of the person to be liquidated with the pen of a crow's tail, prefix and sufix the same with huṁ phaṭ, enclosing it with a quadrangular circle.

Then write huṁ phaṭ again on all sides, enclose the same with a double circle. Write hrīṁ twenty seven times outside the circle and put the yantra in between two sherds of a vessel and worship the same in the prescribed manner as stated previously. The

Eradicating the Enemy

Lord Śiva said

1-4 I shall now tell you about a yantra that eradicates people.

He should draw a yantra on the leaf of a birch tree with the blood of a crow and an owl, write the name of a person to be eradicated and encircle the same with the double line. He should then draw four double-lined pericarps on each of the four sides of the circle and write yaḥ in each of the four pericarps. Worship and meditation should be conducted in the manner as stated before. The ashes of the conch-shell can serve as the substitute for the normal food.

By this process, any creature, not to speak of a human being, can be eradicated from home and made to wander from place to place.

Eradicating the Enemy

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra for the eradication of the enemy. He should draw a yantra on the leaf of a birch tree with the blood of his ring-finger.

2-3 O good-faced lady, he should draw this yantra in the double-lined quadrangular shape, write hruṁ Oṁ Gaṇapatiṁ svāhā in the first line, the name of the person to be eradicated prefixed and suffixed by hruṁ in the second line, hruṁ gandhaṁ ptvā gandhaṁ svāhā in the third line.

4-5 Clad in red garments, besmeared with red sandal paste, the seeker should draw this yantra on the fourteenth day of the month at dead of night and worship the same with red flowers, fragrant fluid of red sandal accompanied by delightful fruits.

6-8 He should feed the maidens at night, give them coins as many in number as his means can afford, worship and meditate upon the deity in the prescribed manner as stated above, concentrating upon his form that is bluish like collyrium or reddish like the pomegranate fruit. He should worship the deity recitworship the yantra in the prescribed manner as stated before.

4-6a The seeker should tie the yantra to the myrobalan tree while the crow with its downward face is crowing aloud. The seeker should remain alert and watchful at night. Repeating the process for three nights and without any mantra in this case he can cause the eradication of the enemy who loses interest at home, is estranged from his people and wanders here and there.

6b-c Reciting the word 'Govinda', he should draw this efficacious yantra in the shape of a crow, with the fluid of red arsenic or with the painter's paint, on a piece of cloth torn from the dead man's coffin.

Eradicating the Enemy

Lord Śiva said

1 Goddess, listen. I shall now tell you about a yantra that can eradicate all sorts of people.

Draw a yantra on the leaf of a birch tree with the blood of a black cock.

2-5 Draw a triangle, putting the name of the person to be eradicated in the centre. Then draw another triangle and put hrīṁ four times in number in the front line and four times on each side right and left, and similarly four number of times hrīṁ in the front line, four on each side, right and left, outside the inner triangle. Then enclose the yantra with a circle. He can eradicate even a dog, not to speak of the person he wishes to eradicate. The procedure of worship is the same as usual in eradication activities. The process of eradication works out rapidly and without any doubt.

Pacifying the Fever

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that cools down the fever of the infants. Draw a yantra in the prescribed manner on the leaf of a birch tree with the articles as stated before.

2-3 In the centre write the name of the person to be relieved of the fever, put yaṁ on all sides of the name and enclose the same with a circle.

4-6 Draw eight petals outside the circle, put the name in each of the petals. Write hrīṁ at the top of each petal. After completing the yantra thus, worship the same, after worship, put it in the cool water. The patient recovers from fever at the expiry of three days. When the fever has subsided, place the yantra in hot waters. Were the infant to wear the yantra on the armpit or the neck, he gets rid of the fever immediately.

Protecting the Infant

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that protects the infants.

Draw the yantra in the prescribed manner with the kind of articles (ink, pen, etc.) as stated before.

2-4 Write the name of the person to be relieved of fever in the centre on the soft leaf of a birch tree. Enclose the yantra with a double-lined quadrangle. Outside the lines write ḍhaṁ hrīṁ four times on all sides, enclosing the same with another double-lined quadrangle, putting tridents in each corner of the same.

5-6 Writing the yantra in this manner, he should worship the same in the prescribed way, enclose the yantra in three coats of gold, silver and copper and wear the same on the neck. This yantra prevents all sorts of diseases. physical as well as mental, such as jealousy,

Averting ill luck to the Women

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that averts evil from the woman in particular and the man in general. Draw a yantra in the prescribed way by means of auspicious articles (ink, pen, etc.) as stated before.

2 Write the name of the person whose evil is to be averted in the centre of the double-lined triangle.

3-4 Draw a trident in each of the three corners and worship the yantra in the prescribed way as stated above. Enclose the yantra with three coats of gold, silver and copper and wear the same on the armpit or on the neck. This amulet destroys threefold evil. The barren woman becomes fertile and attains good luck. O Goddess, whatever I speak to you will never turn false.

Protecting the Embryo

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that protects the embryo. Draw a yantra with the rut of an elephant on the soft leaf of a birch-tree.

2 If the rut be not available, the yantra may be drawn with the mixture of eight fragrant substances (aṣṭagandha).

3-4 Write the name of the lady in the centre, enclose the same with the double-lined circle. Draw pericarps in each of the four corners and write yaḥ, raḥ in each. Then worship the yantra in the prescribed manner as stated before. Tie yantra to the neck. Thus the pregnant woman gives birth to the child comfortably.

Guarding the Pregnant Woman

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that protects a pregnant woman. O Goddess, this meaningful yantra scares away the evil spirits of one's deceased ancestors or manes.

1-4 Draw this yantra on the leaf of a birch tree, in the manner as described above, with the articles, ink, pen etc. as stated before. Write the name of the person to be guarded against evil, in the centre, prefixed and suffixed with Oṁ hrīṁ on both ends. Enclose the yantra with the long-drawn straight lines. Draw eight petals one on each side right and left and three on each side—upper and lower. Put hrīṁ kṣuṁ hriṁ in each leaf to the right and left and kroṁ krīṁ in each of the six petals in front—upper and lower.

5 Worship the yantra, enclose the same in the amulet of gold, silver and copper and wear the same round the neck. The yantra prevents pain in the vaginal passage, also in the head and wards off danger to the embryo accruing from the evil spirits and the manes.

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that can alleviate the tertian fever.

Draw a yantra with the prescribed articles as stated before, on the leaf of a birch tree, O good-faced lady.

2-4 Write the name of the person in the centre and enclose the yantra with a triangle. Worship the same in the prescribed manner and wear it on the right hand. As he wears the amulet, the evil spirits that had come to cause suffering disappear at once as darkness disappears at the rise of the sun.

For Destroying Evil Spirits

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that wards of evil spirits—Śākinī, ḍākinī, bhūtas and vaitālas who catch hold of a person and carry him away.

Nepal Sanskrit University, Balmeeki Campus, Kathmandu

CC-0. In Public Domain. Digitization by eGangotri

2 In order to obtain release from the hold of these evil spirits he should draw a yantra with the articles as stated previously in the manner prescribed in the śāstras.

3-6 Write the name of the person in the centre on the leaf of a birch tree, O good-faced lady, enclosing the yantra with a circle. Then draw eight pericarps outside the circle, three above, three below, one on each side and write hrīṁ in each of the eight pericarps. Worship and enclose the same in the three-coated amulet. This yantra named Tripura-Bhairava should be worne round the neck by the child. The yantra relieves him of dangers accruing from evil spirits.

Protecting from Snakes

Lord Śiva said

1 I shall now tell you about a yantra that protects from poisonous creatures—snakes, etc. This yantra has been revealed by Garuḍa for the immobilization of snakes or for making their poisonous stings ineffective.

Nepal Sanskrit University, Balmeeki Campus, Kathmandu

CC-0. In Public Domain. Digitization by eGangotri

2 Draw this yantra in the manner as stated previously. Worship the same in the prescribed way. Write the name of the person in the centre and encircle the same.

3 Draw eight pericarps outside the circle and write haṁ saḥ separately in each pericarp.

4 Enclose the yantra with three coatings, of gold, silver and copper and wear the same on the armpit. At the very sight of this yantra, the evil spirits disappear in all sides.

5 In the immobilization process, he should be very careful. At every step in the performance, he should remain cautious, vigilant and alert.

Protecting from Danger

Lord Śiva said

1 O lady of charming face, I shall now tell you about a yantra that offers protection to men, women and children.

2-3 The yantra should be drawn in a vessel of bell-metal, on an auspicious day with the fluid of camphor, saffron and yellow pigment mixed with musk by means of a pen made of nutmeg wood, in crosswise, eight vertical lines, thus making the number sixteen.

4 The sixteen lines will make forty nine abodes. Draw tridents in each of the corners of the outer line.

5 Write vowels serially beginning with a in the horizontal-vertical order and then consonants in the same serial order.

6-8 Write six times kraum outside of each line above and below. Worship the yantra with full devotion with the presents of white lotuses, flowers of Mālatī and Bakula trees and also with fragrant and red blossoms.

9 Worship the yantra with devotion and with gifts as prescribed in the *Kalpa*sūtras, reciting the Saptaśatī stotra for three days regularly.

10 Feed the Brahmins with the rice cooked in the milk and mixed with sugar and ghī; sleep on the ground for three nights and worship the yantra with fragrant articles including the nutmeg.

11 Make an amulet with the coating of gold, silver and copper and sprinkle the yantra with the drops of water, O lady of lovely face.

12-14 Wear the amulet on the arm-pit or round the neck. All sorts of trouble, by doing so, disappear in a moment, so do the misfortunes, nervousness and wretchedness. Moreover, if an enemy has invoked an imprecation, it does not produce the evil effect.

This great yantra produces peace, joy and all-round prosperity.

3-6 Draw this yantra on a wide leaf of birch. Write the name in the centre with hrīṁ suffixed and enclose the same with a double-lined circle and write māṁ mocaya on all the four sides, outside the circle. Then enclose the yantra with the three-lined quadrangle. Worship the same with full concentration by means of fragrant flowers and auspicious fruits. Enclose the same with the three plates of gold, silver and copper and wear the same on the armpit or round the neck. As soon as he wears the amulet he is released from captivity. No doubt need be entertained in this matter.

Eradicating the enemy

Lord Śiva said

1-3 I shall now tell you about a yantra which should be drawn with the fluid of a yellow pigment, on the unbroken leaf of a birch tree. Write the name of the person to be eradicated in the centre and encompass the same with a circle drawn around. Draw eight pericarps (3 on each side—right and left, one above and one below) and write the superior mantra (phaṭ) separately in each pericarp. Then worship the yantra in the prescribed manner (as stated above). O lady of pretty 4 face! Mix the yantra either in the meals or in the drinks The person who consumes the same is eradicated without fail.
